AN EVENING WITH OUR EXCHANGES.

Dobs, the Dictator.

There is a good deal of humor in this from the Lexington Transcript:

"Dobs says that he did all he could to prevent the Pullman strike, and that he is unalterably opposed to strikes. A good many people would like to know what Dobs would have done had he been in favor of strikes."

Smothered sarcasm.

People who remember how the late Con. Con. labored will see smothered sarcasm in the following from the Frankfort Capital:

The length of time it is sitting, the entanglements it is falling into, and other events, all indicate that the New York constitutional convention is not profiting as it should by the experience of a body that recently sat in this state.

Shoveling Where There Is No Sugar.

Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and all must endorse the truth of this pungent paragraph from the Richmond Pantagraph:

The Register stuck its paw over in the Tenth congressional fire and attacked Judge Beckner. The Winchester Democrat came to the Judge's rescue with a column and a half of editorial lava. The Register ought to stay at home, but it has the same right to handle Mr. Beckner that the balance of the press has to punch Col. Breckinridge, so let 'em rip.

A Rapidly Rising Young Man.

The Louisville Times tells the following history of the political ascendancy of Hon. Thos. Panyter:

Mr. Panyter will pass from the lower house of congress to the bench of Kentucky's highest court. For a man just in the forties, this raffian son of Greenup has had an unusually successful career. Beginning the practice of law in '73, he has served two terms as county attorney and three in congress, and unless the unexpected happens, he will enter next January upon an eight year term on the bench at $5,000 per year.

Approaching Anarchy.

People must realize that America is approaching a state of anarchy when they read of incidents like the following from the National Tribune:

Things have come to such a pass that when a man declines to give a tramp the price of a glass of beer, he is denounced as a blood-sucking capitalist, who is marked for destruction by dynamite. This is what happened to a man in Patterson N. J. He had the abusive anarchist locked up where both beer and dynamite are not on the menu.

Another Richmond to Be in the Field.

This section will be delighted to hear that we are to have a candidate in the gubernatorial contest, and we should like the Winchester Democrat, which has the following, to tell his name.

There are rumors in the political world that we will have another democratic candidate for governor when the proper time comes, and that he will be an Eastern Kentucky man. It has been a long time since that end of the state has had a candidate for that office, and if they put up a good man the chances for his nomination will be first class.

He is a Bath County Boy.

The record Gov. Claude Matthews is making for himself in his adopted home of Indiana should stimulate the young men of our section to greater efforts in educational matters. The Cincinnati Enquirer says of him:

Governor Claude Matthews walks to the capitol every morning at 8 o'clock, and, throwing off his coat, works at his desk until the evening, spending a very brief time at his lunch, which is of the plainest description. He is often found at his desk as late as midnight, and any body having business with him is admitted without ceremony.

Beckner Has a Walkover.

While the people hereabout will doubt if Little Joe can be strengthened by Mr. Beckner "or any other man," as he is himself a "giant in strength," they are well pleased with Mr. Beckner for the short term. The squable referred to in the following from the Courier-Journal never assumed alarming proportions, and no one in this area ever doubted Joe's triumph in November.

The withdrawal of Mr. D. C. Lisle from the contest in the Tenth district for the nomination for the short term for congress gives Judge W. M. Beckner a walkover for the place, as it is not thought the republicans will nominate again him, and it will also strengthen Hon. J. M. Kendall, the nominee for the long term, who is now certain to be elected by a good majority. It was feared that a squable would arise over the short term which would do much damage to the party in the district, but that has now been adjusted. Judge Beckner will strengthen the ticket very materially, as he is a strong man on the stump and with the people, and will make an active canvass not only until the special election, but until November.

Profitable Stock Raising.

Our farmers will do well to experiment along the line laid down in the following, which we clip from the Jessamine Journal:

The most remarkable increase in the weight of hogs the Journal has had occasion to record, is that of a bunch of 39 head sold by Mr. George Barkley to Mr. J. W. Carroll last Saturday. The hogs were fed for 40 days on swelled corn, and took on an average of three pounds each day. One of the lot, a stag, increased in weight in the above time 175 pounds, a fraction over four and one quarter pounds per day. The hogs were sold to Mr. Carroll at 45 cents, and Mr. Barkley realized $3.75 per barrel for the corn feed. Mr. Carroll sold the hogs in Cincinnati at $5.40 per hundred.

Repentance Comes Too Late.

Those of our readers who kept track of the late Pullman strike, inaugurated by "Dobs, the Dictator," of the A. R. U., will quite agree with the Carlisle Mercury in the following:

Dobs is too late with his appeal to the public to help his cause by refusing to ride in Pullmans. Dobs and the public are not on very good terms just now. The public does not forget that Dobs is the man who has lately shown the most outrageous disregard of its interests, not hesitating to inflict loss and suffering upon thousands of innocent people in order to get at Mr. Pullman. The public may forgive Dobs after it has properly chastised him, but at present the less attention Dobs attracts to himself the better.

Estill Rejoices in a New Jail.

The Irvine Sentinel rejoices that Estill county is to have a new jail.

"At last the agony is over and the new jail building has been located. The court after hearing everything that could be said in favor of the various sites have settled on the southeast corner of the courthouse square. The building will be an ornament to the town, but we confess that we would have preferred seeing it somewhere else, but bow to the spirit of economy that controlled the court in making the selection.

More Now Than It Can Use.

Most sensible people who have thought about the matter will quite agree with the Memphis Scimitar:

There is something ludicrous in the demand for the coining of more silver dollars, when the government finds itself unable to circulate more than one-seventh of the number already coined.

Slightly Sarcastic, It Seems.

The Toledo (O.) Blade, referring to the speech of Senator Caffrey on the sugar tax, says:

Senator Caffrey, of Louisiana, was slightly sarcastic when he referred to Gorman, Brice and Smith as "representing the sugar cane plantations of Maryland, Ohio and New Jersey."

The Seer of Stover.

People interested in the Seventh congressional race will get the "news in a nutshell" from this little squib from the Pendleton Democrat:

Who will win the congressional race in your district? we asked Col. Craddock Tuesday. Breckinridge with hands down, was the answer.

Rule of Three Won't Work.

Those who are in the habit of resorting to the "rule of three" to solve their problems will find that it won't work in this case. The Cynthia Democrat says:

The following question looks to be a simple mathematical problem, but it isn't: A boy ten years of age has a little sister weighing sixteen pounds, and he gets tired of holding her in five minutes. When he is twice as old, how long will it take him to get tired of holding her? Somebody else's sister who weighs 125 pounds?

The Scenes Have Been Shifted.

Those northern papers that were wont to cry aloud about alarming outrages in the south may find a home to know in the following from the Madisonville Hustler:

Something over a quarter of a century ago the south may not have been so very loyal to the United States, but at the present time she is the most loyal portion of the moral vineyard. Opposition to the laws and to the federal government is found north and not south of Mass and Dixon's line. There is no place in the south for such outrageous conduct as has disgraced portions of Illinois, Indiana and other states that in the past boasted of their loyalty. Dels, Sovereign, Waite and such cattle could find no foothold in the south land.

MENESEE COUNTY.

When Made, Population, Territory,
Wealth, Vote, Etc.

Menee county was formed March 10, 1869, and named in honor of Richard H. Menee, and the county seat, Frenchburg, in honor of his political opponent, Judge French. Its valleys are a sandy loam. The "bunches," coves and uplands are clay, intermixed with sand, with a clay subsoil. Its timber is excellent, and nearly five-sixths of its area is almost a virgin forest. Its northern, eastern and southern hills contain three veins of stone-coal of a workable thickness, and the Adams coal is widely known for its excellence for blacksmithing purposes. Several veins of iron ore extend throughout the county, one of which is celebrated as the "Red River Car-Wheel Iron." The Kentucky & South Atlantic Railway extends five and one half miles into the county from the west. Another, the Kentucky Midland, is projected to run through the northeastern angle of the county, and when completed will add a line of some eight or ten miles. The county roads are mud or dirt roads, and after the rainy season, are good for traveling. The execrable system under the general laws of the state is the only existing provision for working the public roads of this county. There are turnpikes in Menee county. The Licking river forms a part of the northern boundary of the county, and Red river forms a part of the southern boundary line, and both are navigable for rafts and flatboats. The Licking is navigated by steamers to West Liberty, in Morgan county. Beaver, Clifty, Copperas, Gladys, Indian, Slate and Salt Lick are all creeks, with excellent facilities available for power to propel machinery. The general character of the timber is good. Hardwood preponderate, such as oak of nearly all kinds, hickory, poplar, beech, white, yellow, and black pine, maple, sugar tree, etc. The walnut timber, except in a few places, have been cut and marketed. This being mainly a mineral, mountainous county, its agricultural products are consumed within the county, with no surplus for export. The grasses best adapted to the soil, and considered the useful and profitable, are red top, clover, timothy, orchard and blue-grass. I think our county is improving its methods of agriculture. The fertility and producing power of our farm lands is improving to some extent. We have had an immigration to amount to anything for the past two years; and in the same time the population of the county has not increased. We have had no additions to our milling or manufacturing interests in that time. About three-fourths of Menee's area is still in forest, but no steps have been taken to renew the destroyed portion. There is a strong disposition among our farmers to procure and use the best garden seeds. *

Frenchburg is the county-seat. The county has a population of 4,665. It is situated in the Tenth Congressional, Seventh Appellate, Twenty-first Judicial, and Thirty-fifth Senatorial districts. In the last congressional election it cast 490 votes for the democratic candidate and 260 for the republican.

ROBBED OF A FORTUNE.

Mysterious Theft of $50,000 in Gold While in Transit from Havre to Paris.

The police of France are investigating what is probably one of the most remarkable robberies on record, and it is believed that the police authorities of the United States will be asked, if they have not already been so requested, to take a hand in the investigation. In some unaccountable manner a cask of gold from New York, valued at $50,000, has been stolen while in transit from Havre to Paris.

The French steamship La Touraine, Capt. Santelli, left New York on July 21st for Havre with forty casks of American gold on board, valued at $2,000,000, and consigned to various people. She arrived at Paris July 28th. The forty casks of gold are believed to have been safely landed at Havre, and they are also said to have been placed complete on the train running between Havre and Paris. But when the precious casks were counted on their arrival at Paris there were only thirty-nine of them. One cask containing $50,000 in American gold had by some means escaped.

The disappearance of the cask of gold has given rise to a number of police theories, the strongest being the gold was followed from New York by expert thieves, who patiently awaited their chance to abstract one of the casks. The police, pending the termination of their investigation, will not give any particulars concerning the robbery, but it is believed that several persons were concerned in the theft, for the cask of gold must have weighed nearly 200 pounds, and even a very strong man could not have carried such a load alone for any great distance.

Associated Press representative who inquired into the facts connected with the missing treasure learned that forty casks of gold, sent from New York by Lazar Freres to the house of Lazar Freres et Cie, in Paris and six casks of gold for the Credit Lyonnais were transferred from the steamer La Touraine at Havre to the railway company for shipment to Paris. The officers of the railway company gave the steamship company a receipt for the gold and placed it in a locked and sealed van, in charge of a special clerk. On the arrival of the train at Paris the wagon containing the gold was taken to the goods department of the railway company in the Rue de St. Petersberg. The consignees were advised of its whereabouts, and were requested to come to it for delivery on the following day.

M. Lazar, one of the members of the house said: "When our clerks applied for the delivery of the forty casks consigned to us there was no sign that the van or seal had been tampered with, but only thirty-nine casks were found. We telegraphed to Havre and received replies that everything had been properly verified and receipts given."

The station-master at the Gare street Lazare was asked to give the railway company's views. He said that as soon as the discovery was made that the consignment was not complete two officials of the company and two detectives were sent to Havre to make inquiries. It was impossible, he asserted, that the cask could have been stolen during its transit from Havre to Paris. He said he doubted if there had been a robbery, and he would not be surprised if the missing gold had been left on board the La Touraine.

Later.—The gold was found, but the thieves have not yet been apprehended.

Put Out in Just Ten Seconds.
Our citizens to the number of two or three hundred gathered on the burnt district here, on last Monday afternoon at two o'clock, to witness the exhibition made by the Cincinnati Tin and Japan Fire Extinguisher Co. The test was given under the personal supervision of Mr. Herman B. Wells, president of the company, of Cincinnati, and Mr. W. V. Snyder, the local agent, of Georgetown, Ohio, and was satisfactory in every respect, clearly demonstrating the Stemple Extinguisher to be one of the best methods to deviate or invented for the controlling of fire.

A structure of pine boards was built, and after being thoroughly saturated with coal-oil, a match was applied. The extinguisher was then turned on and the fire put out in about ten seconds. All who witnessed the test were thoroughly satisfied that the Stemple will do all and more than is claimed for it. The headquarters of the company are S. E. Cor. Sycamore and Canal Sts., Cincinnati—Winchester (Ohio) Herald.

JAPAN'S LAST WAR.

She Has Not Fought With A Foreign Country For Fifty Years.

Japan hasn't been at war with a foreign country for over fifty years. She has therefore done little or nothing since she adopted modern implements of war. This fact lends additional interest to the war with China. The Japanese are fighters, however. They have shown this within a very few years. The stern methods with which a half dozen rebels have been put down demonstrate that the Jap will be a foe not to be despised. In the final battle of the rebellion of 1877 the rebel army was almost annihilated. Out of a total force of 600 but thirty escaped alive. In this struggle, which lasted about nine months, 1,000 lives were destroyed. The cost of the war to the government was between $35,000,000 and $40,000,000. Both the government troops and the rebels were equipped with modern guns, and were officered by modern European soldiers. The rebels were led by the Satsuma clan, which had fought for the government for generations.

The universal testimony given by those who have used Hood's Sarsparilla, as to its merits in restoring the appetite, and as a purifier of the blood, constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine.

A Camp-Meeting Enterprise.

Rev. W. J. Doran, recently one of the leading lights of the High Bridge camp-meeting, and a number of prominent Methodists have purchased forty acres of woodland at Boone's Gap, two and one-half miles south of Boren, on the Livingston branch of the L. and N., which they propose to convert into a monster camp-meeting resort. Cottages will be built and a mammoth auditorium, with a seating capacity of 10,000, erected. The meetings will be conducted on the old-fashioned Wesleyan order and none of the iniquitous accessories at High Bridge will be allowed.

ELECTROPOISE!

For Babies as Well as Old Folks. I am glad to say that the Electropoise has cured me of rheumatism and illness, the result of typhoid fever, as well as catarrh. Have used it in the family from mother-in-law 73 years old down to the baby, used it on the baby while teething, it worked like a charm. For rheumatism we have never found anything to equal it. Several of my neighbors have them and are all well pleased. I can not say too much in praise of the Electropoise.

Mrs. F. M. CALAHAN, Verona, Ky. Brain Congestion and Vertigo Cured With the Electropoise.

Sirs: Last July I was taken with vertigo, a congestion of the smaller blood vessels of the brain (hyperemia.) I agreed with you; at last I ate no solid food, but even soups and liquid food did not agree with me; I was induced to try the "Electropoise," in one night's time it had relieved the brain congestion and vertigo. I began the next day to study, ate well, that time I was pleased, and since then I have been a comparatively well man.

REV. GEO H. MEANS, Covington, Ky. Practical as Well as Theoretical.

I am much pleased with my experience with the Electropoise, and believe it in advance of any known remedy in theory for the restoration of the normal condition of the system. Its effects in the cure of disease has proved its efficacy practically and theoretically.

A CINCH FOR JAPAN.

If the Conflict is Short She Can Easily Whip China.
James M. Rollins, a newspaper man of St. Louis, who recently returned from a three years' stay in Japan, during which time he was associated with Japanese officials, and traveled considerably throughout the country and on the Korean coast, said to an associated press representative; "Japan will no doubt come off victorious over China in the present struggle. If numbers amounted to much Japan would not be a morsel for China, as there are 400,000,000 Chines and only 40,000,000 Japs. Because of the vast expanse of water over there the most of the fighting must necessarily be done at sea. The Japanese navy is now and thoroughly organized. Their soldiers are brave and disciplined; Japan has culled from the cream of modern warfare and has the sympathy of the civilized world.

"On the other hand, China is a nation of superstition and laziness. It has some large war vessels, but they have not been well kept, and are dirty and poorly prepared for an engagement! Chinese soldiers are patriotic, but they are not disciplined. The two engagements already reported prove this statement. The largest man-of-war in the Chinese navy has already been sunk and the usuals lost their lives, while hardly a scratch was felt by the Japanese. The fact that China has a land inlet to Korea will not amount to much in the present struggle, as a number of Chinese soldiers would not avail on Korean soil before an open fire of the Japanese fleet. The Japanese could rout the Chinese army from nearly any Korean city by means of their fleet, as the sea touches all sides of that country.

"My theory is that, if a prolonged war should follow, China might whip Japan by sheer force of numbers, as China could swarm the Japan islands like locusts, and it would not matter much if a half million Chinese lost their lives in the attempt. But in this event Russia, or even America, or England would interfere, as I have said before, the sympathy of the civilized world is with Japan, and will not stand id and see her crushed.

"I know an old soldier who had chronic diarrhea of long standing to have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy," says Edward Shumpik, prominent druggist of Minneapolis, Minnesota. "I have sold the remedy in this city for over seven years, and consider it superior to any other medicine now on the market for bowel complaint." 25 and 50 cent bottles of this remedy for sale by John M. Rose.

Was He Related to the Oldfields Here?
William J. Oldfield passed away recently in Allen county. He was an Englishman by birth, and at an early age entered the British army, in which he served until 1859, when he received his discharge. He was engaged in a number of noted battles. He was before Sebastopol during the siege, fought at Inkermann, and, though one of the "Six Hundred" who rode to death at Balaklava, he was there, and witnessed from the heights their famous charge. He served through the whole Crimean war, was in the Cawnpore and at Lucknow under Sir Henry Havelock, and a witness to all the horrors of the Indian mutiny. He received his discharge from the English army, but again entered the service; was transferred to Canada, and there again was honorably discharged.

With a fever for active service, Oldfield came over into the United States and joined the Federal army at the outbreak of the war, serving to the end. Several years ago he drifted to Glasgow, and there he followed the occupation of a tailor.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is enclosed. I refer to any county officials as to my reliability. WM. ROACH, J. P., Primory, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale by John M. Rose.

DAY'S OF THE HOME MADE.

Times When the Farmer's Clothes Were Made.

The cultivated classes and the manufacture of them were universal in the early days of New England. Nearly every house in the country had ears and great wheel and little wheel, reel and swifts, and dye-tub in the kitchen, and scarn, warping bars and loom in chamber or garret. From the "History of Rochester," N. H., we call the following description:

"Every farmer set apart a portion of his land for flax. It was an indispensable crop, and the manufacture of oil from the seed became a profitable business."

The flax was carefully pulled up by the roots and stacked in the field till thoroughly dry, when the seed was washed, and then was soaked in water for several days, and spread on the ground to be wetted, frosty nights helping to whiten it.

After a suitable time it was stowed away till spring, when it was brought out to be dressed by use of the brake, the hatchet and the swing. By this means the flax was thoroughly bruised and scarned, and the tow was made coarse, woolly and separate from the finer fibers of true linen. It was then combed to complete the separation, and was ready for the wives and daughters to spin and weave into garments.

Wooden cloth was also made at home. The wool was carded into rolls by hand, and then spun and woven into cloth.

All garments were likewise made at home, not only for everyday wear, but the go-to-meeting dresses of the women and the breeches for the men, even the suits that the minister wore in the pulpit and the cloths of representatives to congress, all were home made.

The first carding machine was introduced by Eliphilet Horne in 1811. It caused much excitement in town, and set the old people to shaking their heads and asking what the girls would have to do now.

DON'T KNOW HOW TO EAT.

Many Americans Woefully Deficient in That Branch of Education.

"When my children get to the proper age, I intend to have them learning a bright pipe. I intend to have them taken in hand by some competent person, and give them a thorough instruction in the art of eating, and, further, in the science of finding out what to eat and ordering."

"What do you mean?" inquired a Buffalo Express man who sat next to him.

"I mean this: The average American citizen is woefully deficient in knowledge of what he can get to eat. He falls down when it comes to ordering a dinner. The great majority of people in this country are brought up frugally at home and do not know anything but roast meat dishes. The consequence is that they are unable to go to a restaurant for dinner or to a hotel; he gazes helplessly at the bill of fare and sees many things of which he does not know the component parts. He dares not order anything that he is not sure of for fear of ridicule, and he falls back on roast beef and mashed potatoes."

"The average American doesn't know anything about roast beef," said the man, "and when a visitor shows a bill of fare under a man's nose nine times out of ten he will look it over and then say: 'Gimme a steak and some fried potatoes.' Now, the man who does this day after day doesn't want roast beef."

He is sick unto death of steaks and mashed potatoes. He has no appetite, and yet he keeps on ordering them in dreary and dyspeptic succession, because he doesn't know any better and he is too proud to confess his ignorance. It's that way with me, and I'll bet it's that way with most of you. I am going to relieve my children of all these things. They're going to know what's what when it comes to eating. 'No roast beef domination!' shall be my household slogan."

With a fever for active service, Oldfield came over into the United States and joined the Federal army at the outbreak of the war, serving to the end. Several years ago he drifted to Glasgow, and there he followed the occupation of a tailor.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is enclosed. I refer to any county officials as to my reliability. WM. ROACH, J. P., Primory, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale by John M. Rose.

The Whig Run.

Powell county Whig fans will have no ticket this fall. The Whig committee met at Stanton and decided to make no nominations, but advised Kash, a republican run for county judge. The candidate will not be nominated, probably be petitioned.

The HERALD writes with more pleasure than usual. Kash, like other similar establishment, is told Kentucky, and if you want to be a part of this kind this is the place to rejoice to re-

Both a Bay and Black Horse.

A Mr. Roberts, of Portland, Madison county, on Tuesday rode through our town a horse that is a veritable curiosity. The animal, viewing him from one side, is a blood bay with black mane and tail and black feet, and viewing from the other is a coal black, or nearly so. We believe that on the black side just back of his shoulder a patch of bay color occurs. We have often seen horses that were piebald or pied, on which the white usually predominated, but never one of this description. The horse is 5 years old, 16 hands high, a good saddle, and also buggy animal.—Irvine Sentinel.

Lum, Simon & Co., the former a city officer, on Saturday bought Louisville city warrants to the amount of $54,800.

The death rate of the city of Louisville is figured at 16 to every 1,000 of population. That's not so bad, when one remembers the miserable stuff they call water and drink.

A young man at Cleveland, Tennessee, was thrown from a mule into a fence corner where he lit upon a hornets' nest. His fall pressed the button, as it were, and the hornets did the rest.

Miners about Peru, Ill., are again restless, according to reports, and the county officials of La Salle county are uneasy lest there be an outbreak at any moment. Volunteer companies are under arms.

The election for governor in Alabama came off Monday. Much excitement was one of the features, and the undoubted election of Oats, democratic candidate, over Kolb, the populist, one of the grand results. His majority in round numbers is estimated at 25,000.

Lead carbonate, which gave Leadville its great boom some fifteen years ago, has been discovered on Mineral Hill, in the Cripple Creek (Colo.) district. The vein is said to be four feet wide, and all pay. An assay showed $40 in gold, 200 ounces of silver and 33 per cent lead. Lead us to it.

Not one person in 1,000 of the American people has any idea of the output of gold from the mines in the United States. Every week brings some new discovery in Colorado, which shows that state to be wonderfully productive of the precious metal. The receipts of gold at the Denver mint the past week amounted to $168,129.50 against $44,541.80 for the corresponding week last year. This is an increase of $123,587.61, or about 281 percent. Of this gold a shipment was made Sunday to the Philadelphia mint valued at $142,500. Gold bars are shipped in boxes made to fit them, each box holding about $75,000 and weighing about 300 pounds. At present the Denver mint is making a shipment of one box every other day.

DOWN IN BOURBON.

What a Prominent Breckinridge Man Has to Say About the Situation and the Opposing Forces.

One of the most prominent Breckinridge men in Bourbon county was in Lexington today, and a Leader man had a very pleasant chat with him on topics connected with the congressional race.

The gentleman, while a strong supporter of Col. Breckinridge, denies that he is a politician, and as he is not a politician he does not care to pose in the newspapers as a prophet. In fact he only consented to talk when the Leader man promised to keep his name out of the story.

The reporter asked the gentleman why he thought Breckinridge would carry Bourbon county. "For the best reasons possible. Young man let me tell you who are for the colonel. First take the county officers—and you know they cut the biggest figure in elections. There's Russell Mann, the county judge; James McClure, the sheriff; William Myall, the county clerk; Joseph M. Jones, the circuit court clerk, and Samuel R. James, the jailor; they are all for the colonel."

Then there is John J. Hinton, mayor, and James Murrigan, chief of police, both red hot Breckinridge men. You can't name any such workers as those gentlemen on the Owens' side, and how are you going to beat them. Every single one of them is out to win, and they will win, too."

"Well," said the reporter, "who are Mr. Owens' chief workers?"

"I don't care to call two men who have been defeated for office in late years, twenty-nine are for Mr. Owens and the other three for Colonel Breckinridge. It's simply a merry war between the unfortunate outs and the fortunate ins."

"How will the confederate veterans in Bourbon vote?"

"That I cannot answer, for I am not very close to many of the veterans. Speaking of who is against Col. Breckinridge, let me add that with the exception of three young men, I do not know a man who is against the colonel, that has not some personal or political grudge to 'even up.'

"How about Mr. Owens in Bourbon?"

"He will get a good vote to sure. The Owens club is composed mostly of men who have personal grievances against the colonel."

"How about the vote, that is, how will it foot up?"

"I don't care to do any figuring. I guess I have said enough already, but don't give my name away."—Lexington Leader.

FROM THE LONE STAR STATE.

A Former Reporter of "The Herald" Sends us Some Interesting Items.

Miss Laura Bishop, of Coryell, is visiting friends and relatives at this place.

Miss Edna Howard, of San Antonio, paid us a pleasant visit last week. Miss Edna is a fair young lady and wins many hearts.

Crops are reasonably good this year, but the dry weather since June is going to reduce cotton from one bale to about one-half bale per acre.

The Deaver boys had their trial last week and were sentenced to the pen, one for three years and the other for two. Evan was acquitted. Wm. Deaver, the father of the two convicted boys, has made application for a new trial, but many think it will not be granted.

I see that Mr. Miles Murphy in last week's HERALD speaks of stopping near the center of this state and, being dissatisfied, went on to Iowa. Mr. Murphy may have stopped near the center of Texas, but I am sure he did not touch the heart of it or he would not have spoken of this as not being a land of promise. Texas will butt against any one state in the union for beautiful prairie lands and a productive soil.

Married.—At the Presbyterian church Thursday night, Mr. John N. Ellyson and Miss Elizabeth McMurray were united in marriage by Rev. M. C. Hunter. After the ceremony the couple departed for Galveston accompanied as far as Round Rock by a party of friends. Mr. Ellyson is one of our worthiest young men, manager of the Williamson County Abstract Company, and his bride is a grand daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. D. Clamp, and one of the most estimable young ladies of Georgetown. Many friends wish them a long voyage through life with many of its pleasures and few of its ills.

Last week your correspondent visited the roughs of Texas which embraces Bell and Coryell counties. It was my first visit to that portion of the country, and to say the least, I was very much surprised to see so many rocks, hills and red brush in the beautiful land of Texas.

I only saw one place in Coryell that would anything like do justice to Arkansas as a sample, and that was near the west side of Gatesville. I also visited the reformatory two miles north of Gatesville, and found everything in good order and under the management of intelligent officials.

I met with a number of Kentuckians in Coryell who treated me with true Kentucky hospitality, which made my visit quite a pleasant one regardless of the rough roads I had to go over.

Mr. Jeff Stevenson and George Bishop, formerly of Hazel Green, are located in the heart of Coryell county, and are doing quite well. I had the pleasure of meeting with Miss Maggie and Sallie Stevenson, two charming young ladies who hailed from the beautiful little town of Hazel Green which has been made famous by its fair flowers and talented young men.

WESTERNER.

D. H. Murphy and wife, and his much accomplished daughter, Annie, say:

"THE HERALD is the best local paper published in the mountains. It is the only home paper we have all of which is published right at home. Why should not everybody take it?"

James Killgore, of Menifee county, has a washboard that is attracting the attention of all who have washing to do, and he will have it here at the fair. All who have used it recommend it as the best made.

It will say that of thirty-two men who have been defeated for office in late years, twenty-nine are for Mr. Owens and the other three for Colonel Breckinridge.

It's simply a merry war between the unfortunate outs and the fortunate ins."

THE HERALD

For Sheriff.

We are authorized to announce SAM HENRY WILSON as a candidate for sheriff of Wolfe county, subject only to the will of the people at the polls in November, 1894.

THIS PAPER is all home print, and if you want all the good things it contains You should read every article on each of the eight pages. You will find all the local news that way.

Frank Stamper, of Campion, jailor of this county, is quite ill, and has been sick for about a week past.

Mr. W. T. Caskey is quite sick, and her niece, Miss Slimp, who has been quite ill, is just now convalescing.

The colored school, with P. E. Davenport as teacher, opened for the present five months' term on Wednesday morning.

J. M. Havens, Jeweler, was here Monday, and will locate here until after the fair. He will be found at the store of John M. Rose.

Miss Mattie Quicksail, of this place, has been added to the faculty of Harris Institute of Mt. Sterling. She will teach stenography and type writing.

Misses Fanny and America Hensley, two most refined daughters of W. M. Hensley say: "We would rather read THE HERALD than all the other papers combined."

You can relieve that headache you have by buying a box of Megrinines at THE HERALD office. It will only cost 50 cents and is sold on a positive guarantee.

Mr. A. McClain, a prominent merchant of Morgan county, says: THE HERALD is no doubt the best local paper published. It is devoted to the interest of all the people, and should be read in every home."

Sheriff Drake, through his deputy, C. Hanks, this week advertises sixty-five pieces of real estate in the county for sale for taxes. It is all good property and every piece of it should be sold. Be on hand to buy if you want a bargain.

Elder D. G. Combs was in our office on Wednesday and handed us the following report of his work for the past two and a half weeks:

Preached at the Estill Furnace and marble yard, resulting in 201 baptisms. 106 baptisms, and one was a preacher who was educated for a Catholic priest.

Miss Rose Trimble is still quite ill, and her case seems to baffle the skill of the physicians. She requests us to thank all the people of Hazel Green for the many kindnesses they have shown her during her illness, and prays that none of them may ever be so afflicted. She is a noble, good woman, and has the sympathy of all in her suffering.

Alvin Oldfield, the famous young hunter of Grassy creek, killed eight muskrats Saturday morning. While passing through his father's cornfield along the bank of the creek, he noticed a large quantity of green corn that had been cut down and was lying partly in the water. On investigation he found a large hole in the creek bank, and with the assistance of his dog he went to digging and was rewarded by finding and killing the eight muskrats, as above stated.

Perry Lacy, one of the old landmarks of this country, died at his home in Campion on Friday night last, aged about 73 years. Mr. Lacy was born and raised on Lacy creek, near here, and was postmaster at this place during the war. He was a brother of A. P. Lacy, esq., and James Lacy, of this place. His remains were brought to Lacy creek where the burial took place on Sunday, quite a crowd attending the obsequies. He was stricken with a pain in one of his legs about a week before, and that member swelled until he died.

Joseph P. Rose, of Lacy creek, and one among the best citizens in our county, met with a very serious accident last Saturday. He had been sick, but getting better came to town and got a load of lumber. Just before he reached the front wheel and the wagon bed, where he was so tightly wedged that his body locked the wagon for forty yards. When rescued from his perilous position, which was done by removing the wheel, a doctor was hastily summoned. Dr. Kash attended him, and on examination found that one rib is broken and that he probably received other internal injuries which have not yet developed. Dr. Kash called at our office Wednesday and told us the particulars, and also said that Mr. Rose was then some better, a piece of news that his friends will rejoice to read.

Elder J. A. Howard on Monday night began a series of meetings at this place, and the editor of this paper attended. He occupied the Methodist church on that occasion and on Tuesday night, but since that time the church has been locked against him. The officers of the Christian and Presbyterian churches having previously locked their doors against him, he was without a place to preach, but Judge Rollin Kash offered him the use of his yard, since which time he has been preaching there. We heard every word he said on Monday night, and we failed to hear anything that a Christian should be displeased with. Why, therefore, the churches should close their doors against him is past our comprehension. He is working for the cause of the Master, if his sermons indicate his sincerity, and it seems to us that the people of all denominations sets should give him a full and complete hearing, and afford him every facility and convenience at their command. If he brings souls to Christ he is certainly helping the cause of religion and to that extent repulsing the devil. However others may think about him, we find no fault in him, and we hope for the good name of our town that he will be provided with a house in which to preach.

Later.—The foregoing was put in type Wednesday, and that day the members of the Methodist church reconsidered their action and opened the church to Elder Howard that night.

Elder H. F. Dunigan and myself closed our meeting at Sandfield last Saturday with the result of about 60 additions to Christian Unity, 34 of whom were baptized. The meeting was well attended and good order prevailed, which speaks well for the people in that vicinity. There has been so much talk in Eastern Kentucky about Howard and what he preaches and what he does not preach, I propose to give all a fair opportunity to know it for themselves. If they will just lay down their prejudice and attend my meeting, which is now progressing at Hazel Green, and begin last Monday night with five additions to Christian Unity, three of whom have never been members of the church. Please come out and hear what I preach! Don't take statements from others. Come and hear for yourself. Preachers of all denominations are solicited to come and take a part with us. The meeting will continue over next Sunday, which is the second Sunday in August, and on that day we will have a bazaar dinner on the ground and have two sessions, one at 11 o'clock a. m. and the other at 3 o'clock p. m. This meeting will be held at the Grove in Hazel Green. About 1,000 people are expected to be in attendance. So come next Sunday to Hazel Green and bring your dinners with you, and you will be at a good meeting.

SPENCER COOPER, : : : : Editor.

VICTOR HUGO

Describes the Fate of the World Hanging on the Nod of a Peasant.

In his wonderful sketch of the battle of Waterloo, drawn with touches as bold and masterful as the crayon strokes in one of Michael Angelo's cartoons, Victor Hugo describes the fate of the world as hanging on the nod of a peasant. When Napoleon was examining the ground on which the English forces were awaiting his attack, he searched every spot carefully with his glass, but failed to discover the sunken road of Oahn, which did not make so much as a ripple on the hillside, so completely was it hidden from view.

Turning to the guide, a peasant of the neighborhood, he asked if there was any obstacle to the advance of cavalry. The guide shook his head. The cavalry were ordered to charge. They did so, and Hugo says that 2,000 horses and 1,500 men were buried in the sunken road. This he declares to be the beginning of the long list of disasters which determined the fate of Napoleon at Waterloo. Had the guide nodded instead of shaking his head, the cavalry might have been ordered forward by another route, and the fortune of the French emperor and the history of the world might have been changed.

As though, however, to countervail this, the same writer says that had the little cowboy who acted as guide to Blucher advised him to debouch from the forest above Frischemont, rather than below Planchenoit, the shaping of the Nineteenth century might have been different. Both incidents are probably apocryphal, for only one authority, and he by heresies, gives the story of the Blucher cowboy, and the existence of the sunken road of Oahn is disputed by several, who boldly assert that there was no such road at the point indicated; but either incident is significant, as showing how what trifles the course of history is deflected.—Louisville Times.

"So Clean" is the finest pure white soap ever introduced here. It is better than Cashmere Bouquet for the toilet, superior to Ivory for fine laundry, and ahead of Sapolio for the kitchen. One cake, 10c; 2 for 15c; 4 for 25c. Sold at this office only.

Morgan's Primary.

The democratic primary in Morgan county last Saturday passed off quietly, and a very large vote was polled. The successful candidates are: For county judge, Oscar McKinzie, who received a plurality of 50 votes over W. B. Lyding. For county attorney, I. W. Rose, who received a majority of 300 over J. T. Steele. For sheriff, J. D. Phipps received a plurality of 145 over R. F. Cottle. For jailor, A. O. Peyton, received a plurality of 300 votes over S. H. Phillips. ### Suspended For a Year.

Many western miners will be benefited by the act which the president has signed, suspending for the year 1894 the law requiring those who have located claims to put $100 worth of work or improvements on them each year to retain their rights.

The act was introduced in the house by Mr. Sweet, of Idaho, in response to a strong demand from the western states, and passed both houses with little opposition, being a measure of relief from the business depression of the year. Eastern members acquiesced in the measure since it furnished so little assistance to the sections which had been most unfavorably affected in their industries by the decrease in silver mining, which followed the repeal of the purchasing clause.

Ayer's agree cure never fails to cure fever and ague and malarial disorders. Warranted.

Corn and Cotton Crops.

The continued drouth over the principal corn-producing states of the central valley and northwestern states has resulted in great damage to the corn crop. Very unfavorable reports as to condition of the crops are received from South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri and Oklahoma, while less unfavorable reports come from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, the crop in those states suffering on the uplands. In the southern states corn is generally in excellent condition, and in Georgia the heaviest crop for many years is predicted. Reports as to cotton continue very favorable, although some slight injury has resulted from heavy local rains in portions of South Carolina and Florida. Tobacco is doing well in Tennessee and in some portions of Maryland, Virginia and Kentucky, but reports from Ohio are unfavorable.

Home and Abroad.

It is the duty of every one, whether at home or traveling for pleasure or business, to equip himself with the remedy which will keep up strength and prevent illness, and cure such ills as are liable to come upon all in everyday life. For instance, Hood's Sarsaparilla as a general tonic, and to keep the blood pure and less liable to absorb the germs of disease, will well nigh invaluable. Change of drinking water often causes serious trouble, especially if one has been used to spring water in the country. From a few drops to a teaspoonful of Hood's Sarsaparilla in a tumbler of water will prevent the water having any injurious effect.

Hood's Vegetable Pills, as a cathartic, cause no discomfort, no disturbance, no loss of sleep, but assist the digestive organs, so that satisfactory results are effected in a natural and regular manner.

Kenneth Bezemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhea, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result.

The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by John M. Rose.

Religious Disorder in the Pen.

A dozen or more of the female convicts in the penitentiary at Frankfort are laboring under a state of religious excitement. A majority of them are colored, and they keep up a continual chanting and other devotional exercises far into the night.

Some of the good ladies of Frankfort have been holding prayer-meetings in the woman's department that late, and these inmates professed great interest in the salvation of their souls. The meetings continued, and the result is a perfect gust of conversions. Warden George is naturally a little puzzled as to what regulation to bring to bear upon the disorder growing out of it.

No August Guessing Contest.

The Weekly Courier Journal has withdrawn its offer of $1,000 to be given to subscribers who could name the hottest day in August, and guess closest to the highest temperature on that day. This action was taken because of the serious interruption of mails, caused by the great railroad strike. A simple and liberal guessing contest on the November congressional elections is now being prepared, and will be announced by the Weekly Courier Journal shortly.

Howard Tate, who stood charged with the murder of Andy Johnson, the mountain terror, was acquitted at Pineville July 27, the trial being out less than twenty minutes.

The people quickly recognize merit, and this is the reason the sales of Hood's Sarsaparilla are continually increasing. Hood's is "on top."

VICTOR HUGO

Describes the Fate of the World Hanging on the Nod of a Peasant.

In his wonderful sketch of the battle of Waterloo, drawn with touches as bold and masterful as the crayon strokes in one of Michael Angelo's cartoons, Victor Hugo describes the fate of the world as hanging on the nod of a peasant. When Napoleon was examining the ground on which the English forces were awaiting his attack, he searched every spot carefully with his glass, but failed to discover the sunken road of Orléans, which did not make so much as a ripple on the hillside, so completely was it hidden from view. Turning to the guide, a peasant of the neighborhood, he asked if there was any obstacle to the advance of cavalry. The guide shook his head. The cavalry were ordered to charge. They did so, and Hugo says that 2,000 horses and 1,500 men were buried in the sunken road. This he declares to be the beginning of the long list of disasters which determined the fate of Napoleon at Waterloo. Had the guide nodded instead of shaking his head, the cavalry might have been ordered forward by another route, and the fortune of the French emperor and the history of the world might have been changed. As though, however, to counterbalance this, the same writer says that had the little cowboy who acted as guide to Blücher advised him to detour from the forest above Frischemont, rather than below Planchenoit, the shaping of the Nineteenth century might have been different. Both incidents are probably apocryphal, for only one authority, and he by heresy, speaks of the Blücher cowboy, and the existence of the sunken road of Orléans is disputed by several, who boldly assert that there was no such road at the point indicated; but either incident is significant, as showing by what trifles the course of history is deflected.—Louisville Times.

"Hannah," he spoke rapidly, "such talk surprises me more than any—What can you mean?"

"It came Sister Julia to suppose that I'd marry you? Did you tell her you thought so?"

"I did not. I suppose—I've told you what I suppose about it. Julia was worried about the way father had left his will, and I've no doubt she thought that was the best way to make things equal between us."

"Did she know of that scene in the garden when you behaved so to me the last time I was at your house before Uncle died?"

"Of course she didn't."

"But she did. She saw it, and that was what made her ask you to marry me after her death, and as soon as possible. If you promise her that you will."

"My Lord, Hannah! How could a man, a man that had any feeling, make such a promise to—at such a time as that—and in such circumstances?"

"Did she intimate to you that unless you made some sort of compromise about your father's estate you might have to submit to terms different from what now I understand you to propose?"

"She did not. She was very anxious for a settlement, and—"

" Didn't want you in any way? However, that is a question that perhaps I ought to have asked. I take it back. I noticed that you didn't show any regret when I told you of Julia's seeing you kiss in the garden."

"Why, there was no great harm in that, Hannah."

"She thought there was, and that was why she advised you as she did. What is your opinion now as to whether I told Cullen of it or not?"

"You may have told him for all I know."

"You didn't believe at the time I would tell him, that I warrant."

"No, I didn't."

"But I did tell him; yet not until he was taken sick. I did not before mainly because I was so incensed him that he might have been. I am thankful that I did not, and that the telling, except for a moment, took nothing from the peace of his dying. In your terms to me now," she continued, with coldness that ached him, "if you intend to include any allow- and Cullen's child?"

"Lord, Hannah, isn't Pearce your child too?"

"Let me make a proposal in my turn."

"There was something approaching cunning in the kindly smile with which she submitted her terms."

"I will go to the courthouse, take that will and destroy it, or if you will make over to me and Pearce half the property left by your father I will—"

She paused, as a wily trader, after some tentative words of proposal, waits and watches their effect.

"Oh, Hannah! That's a great deal harder for me. I had any idea you would be with me!"

The look she bestowed on him he interpreted to mean that she was revolving whether or not she should insist, or retract a part. The property he was bargaining for was suddenly advanced in value, and in coldness before his eyes, yet he must adhere to his practice of offering something.

"Yes, harder than I counted on," he said sorrowfully complaining. "Arthur Dabney has been putting you against me, I just know he has. He never did like me; I never knew that he did, except for once; because I never gave him any reason to do so."

"No, Arthur Dabney has been only acting as my lawyer. We'd as well drop the subject."

As she was rising, quickly asking and prevailing until to remain, he said, eagerly:

"I don't know till now how much I loved you. If I promise that you say you won't want to put it off?"

"Oh, no; we will meet as soon as you please—tomorrow, if you say so—at Arthur Dabney's office and have the papers signed."

"Which of the preachers would you want to go along with me? I've no choice myself between Baptist, Methodist or Presbyterian."

"Why, what need is there for a preacher? I should suppose that any other respectable person could be witness."

Her blank gaze, assumed to perfection, indicated much surprise at the question.

"Why, Hannah," alarmed, he said, "I don't—I'm afraid I'm not quite understanding you."

"I doubt if you are."

"What was your meaning? Wasn't it that if I do what you said you'd marry me, and without delay?"

"Not at all. It was that I'd instruct Arthur Dabney to dismiss the proceedings already begun in court and forbear from starting others of which he has been thinking."

He sank back in his chair, pale, abject. Her look of scornful pitilessness exacerbated his every evil passion. As she moved from him he started toward her. Turning, with dilated eyes, she said:

"What do you mean?"

"Hannah! I must—I can't live without you!"

His arms were lifted, and his look was that of one with whom it is perilous to let a woman be alone. She stepped by the door, and called loudly to Mimy, her maid:

"Comin', Mis' Hannah!" In another minute, the woman, huge sleeves rolled up over her vast arms, appeared.

"I don't know why you wanted to call that nigger."

"I'm goin' back, Mimy. I only wanted to tell you if you were there. Keep where I can call you if I need you."

"I'm no answer," she said, turning to him, "to make to your last remark, except to suggest to you not to repeat it. Is there anything else on your mind to occupy your thoughts of business?"

"She was not a quick mind ready to dismiss him, having some other things to say.

Lifted somewhat from the floor by the pit into which he had been cast, anger and sense of the need of removing whatever suspicion she had that his proposition had been made with any knowledge of the consequences of his illness overcame him, with what coolness he could assume, he said:

"Well, Hannah, your conduct took me so much by surprise that I got a little misjudgment just now. I'm all right again. Of course you don't expect me to do anything about the property after what I said. As for what Arthur Dabney said, I think he's begun, and that you hint he's thinking about beginning, if he was to make a will, I see that none of it, not a thing of it, can come to anything. I don't deny, and God knows I don't want to deny, but what you and your child are entitled to your part in what land father brought into the world, and that he left you and he will get, but as the executor of the will, I shall be the one to attend to that."

"I don't expect you anything except what you know you'll be driven to do. Wiley Amerson, you are worse than you took to be. I had the notion on my part that he was making of his will; if you hint he's thinking about beginning, if he was to make a will, I see that none of it, not a thing of it, can come to anything. CHAPTER XII.—CONTINUED

"Human," he spoke rapidly, "such talk makes me more than any—What can you mean?"

"How came Sister Julia to suppose that I'd marry you? Did you tell her you thought so?"

"I did not. I suppose—I've told you what I suppose about it. Julia was worried about the way father had left his will, and I've no doubt she thought that was the best way to make things even here."

"Did she know of that scene in the garden when you behaved so to me the last time I was at your house before Cullen died?"

"Of course she didn't."

"But she did. She saw it, and that was what made her ask you to marry me after her death, and as soon as possible you promised her that you would."

"My Lord, Hannah! How could a man, a man that had any feelings, make such a promise to—at such a time as that—and in such circumstances?"

"Did she intimate to you that unless you made some sort of compromise about your father's estate you might have to submit to terms different from what now I understand you to propose?"

"She did not. She was very anxious for a settlement, and—"

" Didn't warn you in any way? However, that is a question that perhaps I ought not to have asked. I take it back. I noticed that you didn't show any surprise when I told you of Julia's seeing you in the garden."

"What there was no great harm in that, Hannah."

"She thought there was, and that was why she advised you as she did. What is your opinion now as to whether I told Cullen of it or not?"

"You may have told him for all I know."

"You didn't believe at the time I would tell him that I warrant."

"No, I didn't."

"But I did tell him; yet not until he was taken sick. I did not before mainly because it would have incensed him so that he might have killed you. I am thankful that I did not, and that the telling, except for a moment, took nothing from the peace of his dying."

"Lord, Hannah, there was no great harm in that. Hannah."

"She thought there was, and that was why she advised you as she did. What is your opinion now as to whether I told Cullen of it or not?"

"You may have told him for all I know."

"You didn't believe at the time I would tell him that I warrant."

"Let me make a proposal in my turn."

There was something approaching cordiality in the kindly smile with which she submitted her terms.

"If you will go to the courthouse, take that will and destroy it, or if you will make over to me and Pearce half the property left by your father I will—"

She paused, as a wily trader, after some such clever way of proposal, waits and watches the effect.

"Oh, Hannah! That's a great deal harder than I had any idea you would be with me!"

The look she bestowed on him he interpreted to mean that she was revolving whether or not she should insist, or retract a part. The property he was bargaining for was suddenly silent, and he was in suspense before his eyes, yet he must adhere to his practice of chattering over the price.

"Yes, harder than I counted on," he said sorrowfully complaining. "Arthur Dabney has been putting you against me. I just know he has. He never did like me—never did like me. I never gave him a chance to attend to."

"No, Arthur Dabney has been only acting as my lawyer. We'd as well drop the subject."

As she was rising, quickly asking and prevailing upon her to remain, he said, eagerly:

"Hannah, I didn't know till now how much I loved you. If I promised what you say you won't want to put it off?"

"Oh, no; we will meet as soon as you please—to-morrow, if you say so—at Arthur Dabney's office and have the papers signed."

"Which of the preachers would you want me to bring with me? I've no choice myself between Baptist, Methodist or Presbyterians."

"What was your meaning? Wasn't it that if I'd do what you said you'd marry me, and without delay?"

"Not at all. It was that I'd instruct Arthur Dabney to dismiss the proceedings already begun in court and for her to bring others of which he had been thinking."

He sank back in his chair, pale, abject. Her look of scornful pitilessness exacerbated his every evil passion. Both rose. As she moved from him he started to follow. Turning, with dilated eyes, she said:

"What do you mean?"

"Hannah! I must—I can't live without you!"

His arms were lifted, and his look was that of one with whom it is perilous to a woman to be alone. She stepped briskly to the door, and called loudly to Mimy, her cook:

"Come in, Mis' Harnal."

In another minute, the woman, huge, sleeve-rolled up, her arms appeared.

"I don't know why you wanted to call that nigger."

"You can go back, Mimy. I only wanted to know if you were there. Keep where I can call you if I need you."

"I've no answer," she said, turning him. "To make to your last remark, even if I suggested to you not to repeat it, there would be no use in doing so to me, on the line of our business."

She was not quite ready to dismiss him, having some other things to say.

Lifted somewhat from the deep of the pit into which he had been cast, anger and sense of the need of removing whatever suspicion she had that he was plotting had made him an applicant for a dispensation of litigation over the will, with what coolness he could assume, he said:

"No, Mr. Watson, we are not quarrelsome persons, and, like your client, we desire nothing but right."

"Well, I don't blame you much for wanting to be a little niggly over small matters, but it's a good way to be a young lawyer. Except for the awkwardness, not to say nonsense, of having two administrations, I don't know that I'd oppose your application. But if the court understands the law of the case, which they seldom do, they won't grant them, whether I oppose you or not."

"Thank you for your generosity, Mr. Watson. I'll be careful not to put you to a tax upon it."

"Isn't she a beauty? Why? I saw her in Painer's store to-day, and, on my word, I don't remember ever seeing a finer-looking woman. Why, the fellow blushed!" and he laughed heartily. "Well, I'll tell you what Dabney really said. 'She's not in my line, Dabney. If there is to be much of a war, each of us doubts not that the other will fight fairly; you know that, Dabney."

"Certainly I do, Mr. Watson."

"By George," soliloquized the elder when they had separated. "I forgot when she was. Hannah. Enlow. His blushing shows that the thing has broken on him again. Well, if she ever gets to want another husband, as such a woman can't help, and a pity it would be if she could, she'll never get a better than Dabney."

The application for letters was meant mainly to be a little niggly over small matters, and I said to Arthur Dabney that Cullen's widow intended to make every possible issue with his administration of the estate.

It was well Dabney thought to keep the matter in people's minds, hoping that from their discussions things might be gathered which would seem to indicate an attack on such a compromise as he could advise Hannah to consent with. The more he reflected upon Watson's words indicating quasi-acquiescence in the application, the more they seemed suspicious. The difficulties in the case seemed to him to grow more various, subtle and intricate.

avowing it to me shows you to be a savage, and what you would attempt me, if I were a child, should show you to be even worse than that. As for your threat about what you will and will not do about the property, I know, as everybody does, that you will get all and keep all you can. You may not know it, but the very last thoughts given by that good woman to her husband were fear of ruin to him for his evil doings. She told no facts to criminalize him, because she knew the man who had outraged her. Oh, sir. You let your father die with a blot upon his name which you could have hindered; after defrauding your brother of his rights, you would have put honor upon his name, and would now put it on his memory; you neglected and abused a wife who was one of the very saintliest women I ever knew, and you will not gain another end you have in view, you are going to try to oppress yet further the survivors in your family. If it be God's will to allow it some time longer, so be it; but I haven't a doubt that in the end His protection will be upon me and mine. Mimy, come, come," she called aloud.

Without a word of answer he went away.

"What Marse Wiley want 'long wid you, Mis' Harnal? I hear you talkin' so seyonian solum-like."

"Nothing very important, Mimy. I called you to let him know that I thought it time for him to go."

Dabney decided that, with Hannah's consent, he would get assistant counsel. He was moved to this the sooner by the apparently enhanced confidence
